About the Flag Design

The Infinity: Represents limitless connection and a baseline of even platonic affection between every pair.

The ζ-shaped Anchor: In abstract algebra and number theory, the Greek letter ζ (zeta) is commonly used to denote a primitive root of unity, whose powers generate evenly spaced points around a circle. Here, it evokes the unified structure of the network: distinct individuals and relationships forming an interconnected whole. The ζ reaches into the sun, linking that shared structure with the love that sustains it.

The Sun: The sun symbolizes love as a source of seemingly limitless energy, like a star whose warmth and light radiate far beyond itself. Its warmth represents affection's central, nurturing and comforting role, unrelated to sex. Its light represents genuine concern for one another's feelings; communication; transparency. Its rays represent the intention to send care, kindness, and positive energy outward into the universe. "Love is the light that illuminates the darkness, and reveals to the eyes what is seen by the heart."

The Colors: In this design, pink represents affection and physical care, always mutually welcome; green, growth and intentional pacing rooted in personal connection; blue, the wider community. The background draws on demi and polysexual flag designs; the yellow symbols echo the classic polyamory flag.
